Kenya requires most visitors to hold an approved electronic travel authorisation before arrival, applied for online in advance. Passports should have blank pages and at least six months validity.

A yellow fever certificate is required if you are arriving from a country with risk of transmission, and it is checked at entry.

Entry rules change, so confirm current requirements with the official Kenyan portal before booking flights, and check whether your trip includes a Tanzania border crossing if you plan to combine the Mara with the Serengeti. Keep printed masai mara flying safari copies of approvals and read more bookings. Entry guidance is at %LINK%.
