

At Kollysphere's event specialists, we've received hundreds of briefs over the years. We've seen the good, the bad, and the ugly. We've learned that certain mistakes come up again and again, and these mistakes can derail even the most promising event. This article will outline the biggest mistakes companies make when briefing their event agency and explain how Kollysphere fixes them.

The Problem with Vague Goals

The team at Kollysphere fix this by starting every engagement with a discovery session. We ask questions to uncover your true objectives and to define what success looks like. We help you set specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-bound (SMART) goals. Our discovery process is collaborative and thorough. We don't just accept a vague brief; we work with you to refine it. At Kollysphere, we believe that clarity of objectives is the single most important factor in event success.

How Kollysphere Gathers Background Information

We conduct our own research, including market analysis and audience insights. We also ask about your previous events. What worked? What didn't? What would you do differently? This helps us learn from your experience and avoid repeating mistakes. The team at Kollysphere can help you gather and organise the background information that your agency needs.
