Roanoke winters are not usually brutal, but they are messy. Freeze and thaw cycles turn yards into mud, VDOT trucks spread salt and sand on the roads, and the occasional snow melts into grey slush on every doormat. All of that ends up on your floors. Winter house cleaning in Roanoke is about keeping grit, salt and the region's famous red clay from grinding into carpets and hardwood.

Entryways and mudrooms take the biggest hit, but the mess spreads. Salt residue leaves white streaks on hard surface floors, sand scratches finishes when it is walked on, and clay stains carpets if it is not removed quickly. Kids coming in affordable house cleaning Roanoke from sledding and dogs coming in from the yard double the problem.

The Happy Housekeepers, which has cleaned homes across the Roanoke Valley since 1979, includes vacuuming carpets and mopping hard surface floors in every standard visit. Regular vacuuming pulls grit out of carpet fibers before it wears them down, and mopping removes salt residue and muddy footprints from tile, vinyl and wood.

Winter is also when families spend the most time indoors. Dust builds up faster when the furnace is running, and closed windows mean less fresh air. Dusting furniture, window sills, baseboards, blinds and ceiling fans keeps that dust under control, while the complete kitchen and total bathroom clean-ups keep the busiest rooms fresh through the long months.

A weekly or bi-weekly plan works best during mud season, especially for households with pets or young children. Customers in hilly parts of Roanoke County, where driveways and yards drain slowly, often find that winter visits make the biggest difference of the year.

The company is licensed, bonded and insured, and staff are bonded and insured by The Happy Housekeepers, so you do not need to be home on a cold weekday morning. The business holds a BBB blue seal, offers free, no-obligation estimates and accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express and Discover.

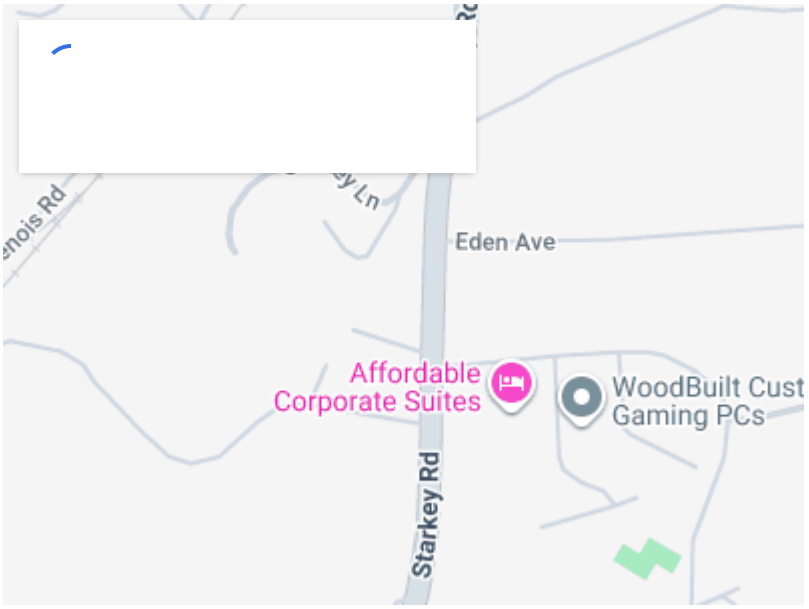

When the weather finally turns, a spring cleaning can follow to wash walls and woodwork, clean light fixtures and reset the whole house after a long winter indoors.

A few habits help between visits. A sturdy mat outside and a washable rug inside the door catch a surprising amount of grit, and a boot tray keeps slush off the floor. Even so, nothing replaces a thorough vacuum and mop on a regular schedule, which is where a professional crew earns its keep during the wettest months of the year.
