

Repiping Ballard WA Salish Plumbing Co Galvanized Pipe Replacement

Galvanized steel supply pipes were standard in Seattle residential construction from the early 1900s through the 1960s, and many Ballard homes still carry original galvanized lines that are now seven or eight decades old. When galvanized pipe corrodes from the inside out, it progressively restricts water flow and eventually begins to leak. Low water pressure at fixtures, rusty or discolored hot water, and visible corrosion at exposed pipe sections are all signs that a Ballard home may be ready for repiping. Salish Plumbing Co handles repiping projects throughout Ballard and North Seattle, replacing old galvanized with modern cross-linked polyethylene (PEX) or copper. The repiping process involves replacing the supply lines throughout the house, which typically means accessing the pipes at key points rather than opening every wall. Salish uses minimally invasive methods wherever possible and patches any drywall access points neatly after the work is complete. The result is modern supply lines rated for decades of service, full water pressure at every fixture, and the elimination of the rusty water that often comes from failing galvanized. A repiping project in a Ballard craftsman bungalow or two-story older home is typically completed in one or two days depending on the size of the house and the complexity of the existing configuration. Salish provides a detailed quote upfront covering labor and materials, permits, and the final inspection required by the City of Seattle. There are no surprise charges added after the work begins.
